CONFIRMED: the first case of coronavirus Malta

Saturday, 7 March 2020

The Maltese authorities are dealing with the first case of coronavirus, which is in isolation at Mater Dei. The case involves an Italian girl of 12 years who lives in Malta.

Minister Chris Fearne, a news conference, said that the child is in good condition.

The girl was in the region of Tento in recent days along with her sister and both her parents. They were in Italy on holiday, and returned Malta from Rome.

It was confirmed that both the children and even parents remained at home and contact "was minimal". The children also went to school.

Net News has received consistently from morning this information popped the first case of coronavirus Malta.

The case has been in the hands of health authorities from yesterday evening.

Apart from this girl, there is another person who is held in mandatory quarantine.

It was the first time these kind of press conferences by health authorities were addressed by the Minister for Health.

Chris Fearne insisted that there is no need for alarm. At the same time, he confirmed the story News Net Boffa Hospital that will be used as a hub if the situation escalate.

Up to now more than 300 test, except one, all tested negative.

Who has any questions, can now use the new 111 helpline